

Chapter 3

Data base summary: sectoral data

Robert McDougall

This chapter goes into more detail on the sectoral data in GTAP. This information draws heavily on the source input-output tables from varying years (see Chapter XX). Since the version 3 data base has been constructed by combining these tables with 1992 macroeconomic data (see previous chapter), the flows reported here will not be identical to those in the IO tables. Thus these figures should be treated as estimates of interindustry flows. Readers interested in analyzing a particular sector/region would be well-advised to thoroughly familiarize themselves with this information in advance, as it will play an important role in determining the outcome of any model simulations.

3.1 Disposition of Sales

Tables 3.1 and 3.2 report sales summaries for all 37 GTAP sectors, with one page for each of the 30 GTAP regions. The first group of tables report this sales information in value terms (millions of $US 1992), while the second provide the same information in share form. For purposes of discussion, we focus here on the part 1 of Table 3.1, which refers to Australian sectoral sales to intermediate uses (IU), private consumption (C), investment (I), government consumption (G), and exports (X). Starting at the top of this table, we see that grain, livestock and forestry products are rarely consumed directly. Most sales are either exported, or sold to domestic processors (IU) who in turn sell their products to consumers. This is not the case, however, with fresh fruits and vegetables (other crops) and fish. Here, sales to private consumption are quite significant.

As expected, natural resources (coal, oil, gas and other minerals) are either exported or sold to refineries or distribution networks. Manufactures can be broadly divided into those which sell a large share of their output to consumers (beverages and tobacco, textiles, apparel and leather, petroleum, machinery and equipment) and those which sell mostly to other firms (pulp and paper, chemical and mineral products, chemicals, metals). Services are sold to both firms and households, by and large. The exceptions are construction services, which are largely an intermediate input or an investment good, and dwellings, which are by definition a consumption good.

Construction is indeed the most important component of investment in Australia. This is followed by machinery and equipment, trade and transport activities and other private services. The government is also a major purchaser of services. Indeed, apart from some purchases of forestry, pulp and paper products, it consumes little outside of services. The final column in Table 3.1 refers to exports. Here we see the overall importance of farm, food and natural resource-based products in total Australian exports.

3.2 Structure of Sectoral Costs

Tables 3.3 and 3.4 report the structure of sectoral costs in the version 3, GTAP data base. As noted in the previous chapter, the primary factor shares in agriculture are based on econometric evidence. Elsewhere, the labor shares are inherited from the input-output tables, with capital's share claiming the residual (including returns to self employed labor in most cases).
